MEET OUR NEW DESIGNER

PAULA HECKMANN

When I was a child I learned how to bead on a loom and loved it but, like many other things people learn as children, it took a backseat to school, family and friends for a long time. All of you that are reading this also know that once a beader, always a beader and it has been a major part of my life and business for a number of years now.

I am married, a mother of 6, grandmother of soon to be 5 and work for The Embroiderers' Guild of America, Inc. I have been a traveling teacher for more years than I care to count and also have an online mail order business. I have been designing quilts and cutwork lace for most of my life and continue to do that. Now I am also designing and teaching beading projects through EGA and am continually fascinated by the attraction they hold for everyone that sees them and cannot resist the urge to touch beads.

For the past several years I have also had a full time job that has kept my designing to a minimum. Joining the Bead Coop has come at a very good time for me as I have left that job and am spending my time now doing what I love and that is DESIGNING again full time. I will be posting designs on the Bead Coop site as I have them available and hope that more will be coming in the near future.

If you have any questions about any of my work that you find on this site, you may reach me via email at heckmann@cookeville.com any time. If you would like to see the other work that I do, please visit my web site at www.keepsakecutwork.com. I spend a good bit of time traveling, but always have my computers with me. I do custom designs for individuals and groups, as the design for the Stan Hywet Museum that can be found on the Bead Coop Site. If you have a particular desire for something personalized, I would be happy to work with you.

I hope that you will come back to the Bead Coop often to see everything new that will be showing up on this site---something for everyone from gifted designers that I am very happy to be associated with.
